

Songkick App Store Reviews.

What users had to say.

Subtle annoyances + wishes

- [10 votes] “Would be nice to have links to artist websites for a quick scan of music to see if I like them.”
- “It would be so much more useful if events had a link to the venue or band pages, or at least a one-click way to search for them on Google or spotify. As it is, it's a huge pain trying to find out about someone I can't place or haven't heard of before.”
- [9 votes] “Shows me too many other bands I don't follow. If the app could figure out to show me bands just like the ones I follow and not just the popular bands I would have given it more stars.”

Red flags!

- ““They ask permission to go through your music library to find your favorite artists... but it shows people I never heard of... some that I have heard of and would not pay for their concert”
- “New update feels more like you have to look for something specific. I like to uncover new music and this was a good app for something like that. The new update looks like a free music download when the first smart phones came out.”
- “The Spotify connection should be automatic because every so often I'll find artists I follow in Spotify are not there.”
- [14 votes] “A recent update seems to have removed chronological list order for tracked artists. Instead, there is now a page showing multiple horizontal carousels with recommendations that are not especially useful to me..”
- “The last update puts the list of upcoming concerts one level deeper than it used to be. I find this pretty inconvenient as it is the thing I use most in the app.”

Frustrated complaints

- “The most recent update to Songkick completely ruined the app. It went from a convenient way to track concerts I'm going to or planning on attending, to an unorganized list of shows I'm not interested in.”
- “So far not that good. Understood SK could scan my Apple Music/iTunes library and send me concert notices based on my artist list. Certainly not easy to find out how to set that up. I don't need a million artists I don't know.”
- [8 votes] “Was a great app but the recent updates have ruined it, the concerts page layout is awful and messy. The 'trending' and 'similar vibes' lists are cringe worthy, we already know what music we like. Why, why break what wasn't broke?!”
